MercyOne Air Med touched down in Hampton on Tuesday August 2 for National Night Out.

Franklin County law enforcement holds first annual National Night Out

BY TRAVIS FISCHER
Franklin County’s law enforcement, along with area fire and rescue personnel, came together on Tuesday, August 2 for the community’s first annual National Night Out.
The Hampton-Dumont High School parking lot was filled with fire trucks, ambulances, police vehicles, and more as the community came out to enjoy an evening with the area’s law enforcement officers.
National Night Out, held in the first Tuesday of August, is a program designed to build up the relationship between communities and law enforcement that has been spreading across the country since 1984. This is the first year that Franklin County’s area law enforcement has put on the event.

“It was kind of a joint effort,” said Dodd, who described the event as the result of a collaboration between his deputies, Hampton police officers, and Franklin County Emergency Management Coordinator Joel McWilliams.
Working together, they collected donations for food, prepared giveaway items, and set up activities for the kids for the event.

“It’s kind of neat,” said Dodd. “The guys had the idea and ran with it.”
Police officers were on hand to give kids a close-up look at their tools and vehicles. Similarly, volunteers came from Franklin General Hospital to demonstrate their ambulance along with fire department trucks from Hampton, Sheffield, Coulter, Latimer, Hansell, and Alexander. Kids were even able to beat the heat a little bit by playing with a live fire hose.
In addition Korner-Whipple

Pharmacy, La Luz Centro Cultural, and Franklin County Crisis Intervention were also there with games and giveaways.
For food, volunteers served up hotdogs and water donated by Fareway along with bags of chips donated from Kwik Trip. Sky Kone was there dishing out ice cream throughout the event, sponsored by First Bank Hampton.
Tables for the night were loaned out by the Aredale Fire Department.
Between the food, the activities, and especially the free ice cream, the inaugural event drew in a solid crowd of people to weather the heat for the evening.

“I think we had a great turnout,” said Police Chief Bob Schaefer.
Near the end of the evening, the National Night Out finished off with a visit from MercyOne Air Med’s helicopter, which made a landing in the high school parking lot and allowed kids a chance to see the rescue vehicle up close.
For a first time event it seems that the National Night Out was well received and officers are looking forward to making it bigger and better next year.

The Hampton Aquatic Center put on a special fundraising event on August 5 featuring a parade, swimming activities and more.

Hampton Aquatic Center holds special summer fundraiser

BY TRAVIS FISCHER
The Hampton Aquatic Center had a day of special activities on Friday, August 5 to raise funds for future projects.
“We wanted to do something fun for the kids,” said pool manager Emileigh Eilderts.
The festivities began with an afternoon parade downtown as supporters marched from the Windsor Theater, over to Main Street, and up to the pool. From there, the pool offered a hotdog lunch and bake sale before opening up for free swimming from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
After shutting down for an hour so that swimmers could get dinner at visiting food trucks while taking a shot at dunking volunteers for the dunk tank, the pool opened again for the evening with another round of contests and games, with prizes and giveaways for the kids.

The fundraiser event is raising money for a variety of pool improvements. The pool is looking at a variety of improvements, from new lifeguard chairs, umbrellas, and sun shades. At some point, a rock climbing wall may even be in the cards.
With more than 180 people coming down for the day’s event, the pool day fundraiser was well received and Eilderts hopes that it will be the start of a new summer tradition.
“We would love to make this an annual thing,” said Eilderts.

La Luz gives out backpacks to community kids

BY TRAVIS FISCHER
La Luz Central Cultural helped community kids get ready for the upcoming school year during their Back To School event on Monday, August 8.
“We had a great turnout,” said Liliana Velasco.
More than seventy backpacks were handed out to incoming students during the event. Though parents with kids that couldn’t make it will have a second chance to get one in the coming weeks.
“We are going to have more come in,” said program coordinator Janette Acolt.
La Luz has distributed backpacks in the past, but this year they decided to make a bigger event out of the night.

“This year we went a lot bigger,” said Liliana Velasco. “We had a great turnout.”
Along with providing kids with backpacks, La Luz had staff there to help with registration and meet with the new high school principal.
On the more fun side of things, area community groups offered a variety of snacks, games, and activities for the kids to enjoy.
Franklin County Extension was there serving up hotdogs and chips while providing the kids with puzzles. NIACC, Crisis Intervention, and more were also around to offer educational resources and games.

READER OF THE WEEK

Josui Moser is the Hampton Public Library's reader of the week.

Reader of the Week at the Hampton Public Library is Josui Moser, age 8 and in the third grade. Josui is the daughter of Nina & Steve Moser and her favorite books are the Babysitter's Club by Ann Martin. She is also the granddaughter of Marilyn Moser, who now is a librarian at the Hampton Public Library.

Library Fun Fact: When they opened the time capsule in 2020, Miss Frieda Blum wrote "The Future, Many larger libraries today are using a library catalog printed by a computer and available to the patrons instead of the card catalog which has been in use since the beginning of this library. Also many newspapers and magazines are available on microfilm. One wonders if the library of 2020 will not be almost entirely a library of micro-filmed and the shelving as we know them today will not then be antiques. Also one wonders if the Carnegie Library dedicated in 1905 and housing the present library will still be standing and used as a library. No doubt there will be many innovations in library work which are not even dreamed of now." Yes, Miss Blum this lovely Carnegie building is still standing and still used as a library. And No, the shelves are not empty!

Yard and Garden: Create Great Shade Gardens

Shade gardens are great places to be on hot summer days. Many plants are well-suited for shady gardens – and hostas aren’t the only options. Iowa State University Extension and Outreach horticulturists answer common questions about selecting the best plants to grow in the shade and the care recommendations you need to create great shade gardens.

Which perennials grow well in shady locations?

Perennials are great choices for creating an attractive garden that comes back year after year. Be sure to select a variety of species that bloom at different times of the year to provide season-long color. Perennials that are good choices for partially to heavily shaded locations include black snakeroot (Actaea racemosa), red baneberry (Actaea rubra), lady’s mantle (Alchemilla mollis), astilbe (Astilbe spp.), Japanese painted fern (Athyrium niponicum var. pictum), heartleaf brunnera (Brunnera macrophylla), bleeding heart (Lamprocapnos spectabilis), Japanese forest grass (Hakonechloa macra), hosta (Hosta spp.), crested iris (Iris cristata), creeping phlox (Phlox stolonifera), Jacob’s ladder (Polemonium caeruleum), lungwort (Pulmonaria spp.), celandine poppy (Stylophorum diphyllum) and toad lily (Tricyrtis spp.).

What are some good native perennials for a shady site?

When selecting plants for the shade garden, one group of plants that is often overlooked are native woodland wildflowers. Since they are native to the state, woodland wildflowers are well adapted to the area. They are easy to grow and perform well when given a favorable environment.

Native woodland wildflowers that make good additions to the home landscape include wild columbine (Aquilegia canadensis), Jack-in-the-pulpit (Arisaema triphyllum), goat’s beard (Aruncus dioicus), Canadian wild ginger (Asarum canadense), Dutchman’s breeches (Dicentra cucullaria), shooting star (Dodecatheon meadia), false Solomon’s seal (Maianthemum racemosum), Virginia bluebells (Mertensia virginica), woodland phlox (Phlox divaricata), May apple (Podophyllum peltatum), Solomon’s seal (Polygonatum biflorum), bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis), trillium (Trillium spp.), merrybells (Uvularia grandiflora) and others.

Obtaining plants is easy. Woodland wildflowers are readily available at garden centers and mail-order nurseries. Do not remove plants from natural woodland areas.

Which native ferns are suitable for the home landscape?

Ferns are great additions to shade gardens and they pair nicely with woodland wildflowers and spring flowering bulbs. As these plants bloom early in the spring and often disappear by midsummer, they leave empty spaces for ferns to expand into during the summer months. Ferns are often fine-textured perennials that also combine nicely with other more coarse-leaved plants like hosta. Most ferns perform best in moist soils in partial to heavy shade

Iowa native ferns that are good additions to shady locations in the home landscape include lady fern (Athyrium filix-femina), sensitive fern (Onoclea sensibilis), ostrich fern (Matteuccia struthiopteris), cinnamon fern (Osmunda cinnamomeum), Christmas fern (Polystichum acrostichoides), interrupted fern (Osmunda claytoniana) and northern maidenhair fern (Adiantum pedatum).

What are some good annuals for shady garden areas?

Annuals are a great way to introduce color to a shade garden. Annuals that can be successfully grown in shady areas include wax begonia (Begonia × semperflorens-cultorum), impatiens (Impatiens walleriana), lobelia (Lobelia erinus), coleus (Solenostemon scutellarioides), wishbone flower (Torzenia fournieri), polka dot plant (Hypoestes phyllostachya) and pansy (Viola × wittrockiana).

Which shrubs will grow in shade?

Shrubs are a great way to give height and structure to shade gardens since most perennials and annuals grown in shady locations tend to be shorter than 2 feet tall. Woody shrubs do best in partial shade locations that receive two to four hours of direct sun a day. Shrubs that can be successfully grown in partial shade include fothergilla (Fothergilla spp.), smooth hydrangea (Hydrangea arborescens), oakleaf hydrangea (Hydrangea quercifolia), Virginia sweetspire (Itea virginica), Japanese kerria (Kerria japonica), alpine currant (Ribes alpinum), arborvitae (Thuja spp.), hybrid yew (Taxus × media) and Russian cypress (Microbiota decussata).

Iowa native shrubs that can be successfully grown in partial shade include serviceberry (Amelanchier arborea), pagoda dogwood (Cornus alternifolia), gray dogwood (Cornus racemosa), bush honeysuckle (Diervilla lonicera), common witch hazel (Hamamelis virginiana), arrowwood viburnum (Viburnum dentatum), nannyberry (Viburnum lentago), American cranberrybush viburnum (Viburnum opulus var. americanum) and Canadian yew (Taxus canadensis).

Iowa Attorney General’s Office investigates scammer calls

KATE KEALEY
IOWA CAPITAL
DISPATCH

Iowa’s attorney general’s office, along with 50 other attorney generals, has formed a task force aimed at curtailing illegal robocalls in the United States. The task force’s focus is to investigate and shut down telecommunications providers that profit from failing to stop the illegal scam calls.

Over 33 million scam robocalls are made to Americans every day, according to the National Consumer Law Center and Electronic Privacy Information Center. In 2020, there was a decrease in scam calls due to the pandemic.

Scam calls are now on the rise again, resulting in more than 1,500 calls per second, according to AARP.

The Anti-Robocall Litigation Task Force has issued 20 civil investigative demands to 20 entities allegedly making foreign scam calls. Roughly $29.8 billion was stolen through robocalls in 2021 alone, according to a press release from the Iowa Attorney General’s Office.

“Robocalls aren’t just an Iowa problem,” Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller stated in a press release. “They are a nationwide problem. That is why I am proud to join my fellow attorneys general. We will take this fight to anyone who helps these scammers and robocallers. If the telecom industry won’t police itself, the Task Force will.” Imposter scams, which include phone calls, emails and social media posts, had the third highest number of complaints to the Iowa Attorney

General’s Office in 2021. As of 2022, 146 million robocalls have taken place in Iowa, equaling an estimated 50 calls per targeted person, according to Robocall Index.

The callers often fraudulently present themselves as the Social Security Administration or Amazon, during which the caller will ask consumers to make a payment through a gift card, wire transfer or cryptocurrency. Many of the scams target seniors and other vulnerable populations. The Social Security Administration typically contacts individuals through the mail if there are problems with an account as opposed to over the phone.

According to the Social Security Administration’s website, employees will never promise benefits in exchange for personal information or money. The Iowa Attorney General’s Office recommends vigilance against prerecorded calls pretending to be government agencies.

Service providers are improving blocking and labeling resources to help consumers avoid scam calls. Consumers can also register to call blocking services with their cellphone providers. The Federal Communications Commission provides a list of tools for anyone experiencing unwanted scam calls.

Consumers are encouraged to report robocall complaints to the Consumer Protection Division at consumer@ag.iowa.gov or by phone at 515-281-5926 or 888-777-4590.

Small Shops, Big Experiences

You know that feeling when, purely by happenstance, you find yourself walking through the door of a charming storefront with a creative name on a three-block Main Street in a town you’ve never visited, and its, for lack of a better word, magic? Just entering the place makes you feel like you’ve found a secret portal to a wonderland! A Narnia-esque oasis positively overflowing with personality from the window displays to the person who greets you warmly. Who, you’ll often find, may well be the owner, and not always even the first generation, and can talk all day about what the store has to offer. That experience, and the warm fuzzies we get from it, is baked right into the recipe of small-town specialty shops. From antiques and collectibles to funky boutiques to bookstores and anything in between.

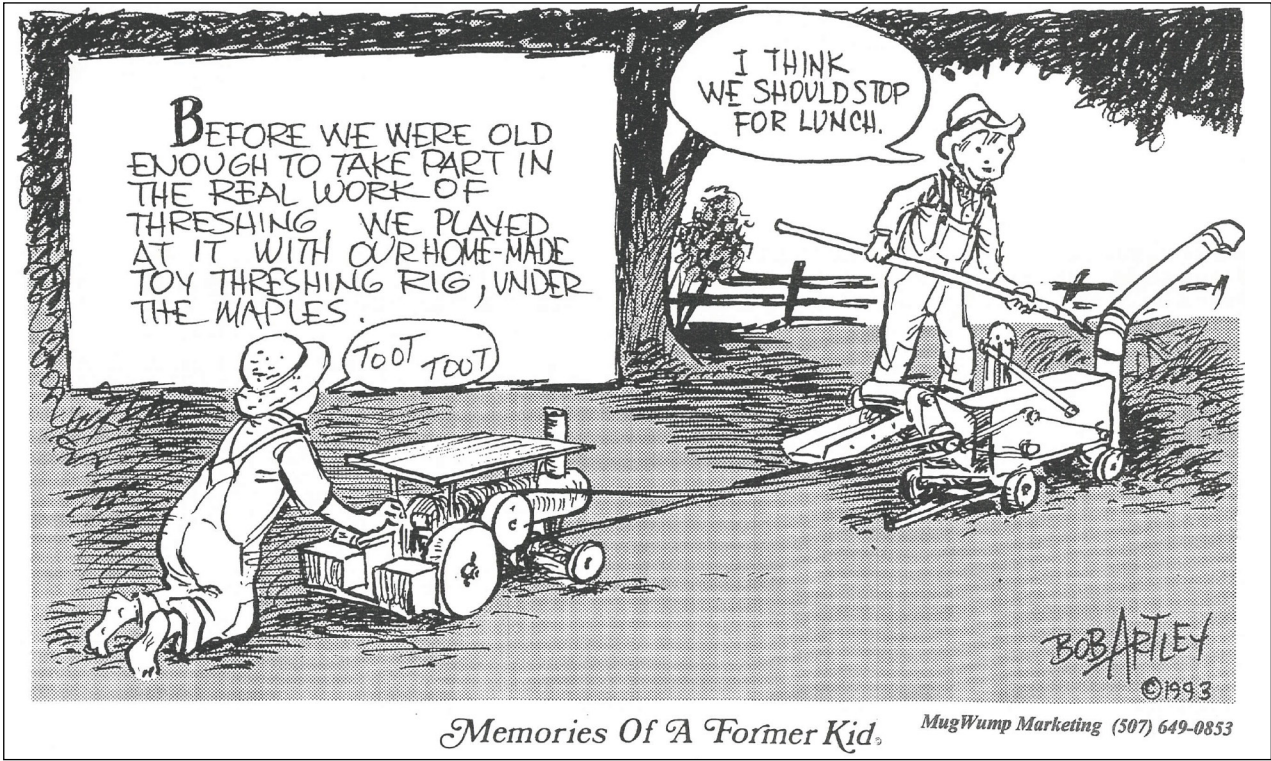

Small businesses, and specifically small businesses in small towns, just have that “it” factor.

Where I live in rural Iowa, we have a vintage vinyl record shop with an inventory of over 10,000 albums and pop culture collectibles of every sort, which is directly across the street from a Mid Century Modern-focused vintage and retro home décor shop that pulls clientele from all over the country. And these are just two of the unique specialty shops on our Main Street. Businesses like these offer an enviable combination of exceptional inventory and enchanting experiences, and do you know who envies that combination the most? Big box businesses and online marketplaces.

Large chain stores and online sellers can do a lot of things, but what nearly all of them struggle with is providing the magic. When you walk into a massive variety store or shop online, you will probably find what you need, but you will rarely (never, if you shop solely online) find a smiling face behind the counter who is positively thrilled to see you and incurably obsessed with the products and services they offer.

These days, after a few years of limited experiences and ample solitude, people are absolutely clamoring for new, positive experiences, and here’s the thing: you are more likely to create a magical experience by veering off the beaten path, down the gravel roads, and into the hidden gems that small towns have to offer. There is a name for it and everything. It’s called “destination shopping,” and it’s a big deal! There are now whole destination shopping trails and planned events popping up all over the place based on peoples’ particular interests. The idea is to take a day or, better yet, a weekend or longer, and follow the trail to shops that fit your interests. You can get maps and resources, and all you need to do to see if there’s one near you is a web search for your state, shopping interest, and something like “trail” or “network.” You can also call Chambers of Commerce or Tourism and Visitors Bureaus in the area you’d like to visit, and they will be able to get you headed in the right direction.

Lastly, if you’re lucky enough to live in a small town that has at least one of these magical wonderland specialty shops, for goodness sake GO INTO THEM! Even if it’s not your “thing”. Your town needs small and unique retail. Specialty businesses help attract workforce and visitors, contribute to the personality of your community and I hope you know these businesses are consistently the biggest sponsors, advocates, and supporters of things like local

We Need Warren Harding

THE ALTERNATIVE
Fritz Groszkruger

The Senate passed the $280 billion “Chips For America” bill. Well intentioned, but I think there are unfortunate unintended consequences down the road.

In Farm Show Magazine there was an entry about a farmer with a General Motors pickup that sits waiting for parts to honor a warranty claim concerning a DEF (diesel exhaust fluid) problem that crippled its Isuzu V6. In my experience whenever I see an approaching pickup with one light out it identifies it as General Motors.

I have a friend who swore he would never buy another General Motors product because of the bailout in 2008. This particular guy went broke with his excavating business during the 1980s Farm Crisis. But he didn’t declare bankruptcy. He worked and paid every single creditor who had trusted him.

General Motors made a faulty ignition switch that ultimately cost 124 people their lives when their cars unexpectedly went out of control. GM got a slap on the wrist even though they tried to cover up their mistake beginning in 2001.

The drone of underpaid and abused workers we hear from unions just might be true after all. A big chunk of their paychecks goes to enable mismanagement at the corporate level similar to a parent enabling a dope or video-game addict. Whether through inflation or taxation, we pay for shoddy products and poor business decisions with subsidies and mandates. I wonder, are these bailouts planned ahead of time by crony capitalists and their congressional pets, or are they just plain dumb?

In the “bailout-plan” column is the Ukrainian war and the Covid 19 pandemic. Ukraine has zero strategic value for the United States, yet tens of billions of American workers’ hard earned cash now reside in the pockets of so-called defense contractors. Russia’s defense budget is only 13% of the United States’ defense budget. Yet gullible consumers of corporate propaganda actually believe Russia is on a march to rule the world.

With actual fatalities similar to those from a bad flu, pharmaceutical companies are fleecing the working class with a constant stream of vaccines that don’t work and have a largely unreported record of terrible, adverse reactions. Moderna and Pfizer are featured in the Wall Street Journal driving up real estate values with their executives and workers on a buying spree of penthouses and mansions.

The traditional bashing of welfare cheats dissolved to some extent when Republicans knelt before Bill Clinton, praising him for his welfare reform. Interestingly, there was a huge increase in bad backs and mental illness accompanied by Social Security Disability checks about that time. But corporate welfare has these unfortunate individuals beat hands down.

Joni Ernst and Chuck Grassley have joined Bernie Sanders (Democratic posterboy for stolen elections) in a losing effort to defeat “Chips For America.” This bill has to be one of the biggest rewards for incompetence ever invented.

This kind of thing is what really adds up to recession, which recent GDP data indicate we are in right now. Wage gains are 4% behind the inflation rate, an indicator of increasing wealth disparity between rich and poor. That disparity is facilitated by corporate welfare as in “Chips For America.”

When people like Grassley, Ernst, and Sanders prove their commitment to America by further letting working families keep what they earn, recession will self-correct.

In 1920 there was a sharper downturn in the economy than the one in 1929. President Warren Harding drastically reduced the size of the federal government. After a year and a half of sorting out waste America had one of the most prosperous decades in its history. Contrast that with Hoover’s and Roosevelt’s numerous programs for helping put Americans to work. But where did they lead? The Great Depression for 16 years.

A tale of two cons

AGE OF THE GEEK
Travis Fischer

I must have caught the travel bug because I’ve been back in the Central Standard Time zone for less than a week and I’m already set to take off again.

Within days of returning from Comic-Con, tickets for TwitchCon went on sale. Coincidentally, both conventions happen in San Diego, so I’ll be returning to the west coast this October to the very same convention center.

Maybe I’m just making up for lost time. Last July was the first time I’d been back to the San Diego Convention Center since 2018. Normally, I only take one vacation a year, but I think that my perspective on things has changed a bit since the pandemic. Carpe diem and all that.

Fortunately, the travel bug seems to be the only thing I’ve caught thus far. One would think that, considering the last two years, Comic-Con couldn’t possibly be anything but a COVID-19 super spreader event. Quite frankly, the risk factor seems absurdly high. Five days of 100,000+ people from all corners of the country packing into lines and rooms for hours upon end. Most of them having gotten there by navigating crowded airports and sitting in metal tubes with re-circulated air.

The result: Of the hundred or so people in my Comic-Con line waiting group, at least four walked away from the convention with a confirmed case of COVID-19. It’s a testament to the power of vaccines that I didn’t catch a case myself as I had prolonged exposure to three of them at various points during the convention.

All things considered, I would say it was an acceptable result. Yes, people got sick and were down for a few days after the convention, but that was a pretty regular occurrence before the pandemic. Con-Crud has been around forever. There have been several times over the years that I’ve come home from San Diego with a nasty cough.

But will TwitchCon foster the same result?

Comic-Con took some pretty reasonable precautions to mitigate the spread of illness during the convention. Along with an indoor mask mandate, every attendee had to demonstrate proof of either vaccination or a negative COVID test. It’s debatable how effective the former policy was, but the latter at least stacked the deck by limiting the pool of people to those least likely to catch or spread the virus.

TwitchCon, as of now, is not applying either policy.

If I were to guess, I’d say that the lack of a mask mandate is a visibility issue. TwitchCon is a convention of people that broadcast themselves across the internet. They want faces and clean audio, neither of which are very compatible with masks.

As for vaccination verification, I presume that’s simply a cost-saving matter that Twitch, or their Amazon parent company, simply did not want to spring for.

A lot of people aren’t happy about this, and I’d certainly prefer if they too applied the same policies that Comic-Con did, but I have to admit that the science enthusiast in me is curious about how things will turn out.

Granted, it’s not a perfect comparison. Same convention center and probably a reasonable crossover of demographics, but TwitchCon is both a smaller and shorter affair than Comic-Con, so it has that in its favor when it comes to mitigating spread.

And while I’m not super thrilled about the idea of taking part in this experiment, I suppose I’ve pressed my luck thus far. May as well go all the way.

Carpe diem and all that.

Farmland Leasing Meeting Set For August 23 In Hampton

Iowa State University Extension and Outreach in Franklin County is hosting a farmland leasing meeting on Tuesday, August 23, at 7:00 P.M. to address questions that landowners, tenants, or other interested individuals have about farmland leasing.

The meeting will be held at the Youth for Christ Building located at 420 4th St. SE Hampton. The meeting is approximately 2 ½ hours in length. Similar meetings are being held across Iowa. Other locations can be found by contacting the Franklin County Extension Office or the Iowa State University Extension and Outreach website at www.extension.iastate.edu/agdm/info/.

Attendees will gain an understanding of current cash rental rate surveys and factors driving next year's rents such as market trends, input costs and government support. They will also learn about factors affecting land values and the results of farmland value surveys. The program will also include information on understanding how flexible cash rents leases can be used in these times of economic uncertainty. There will also be discussion on understanding property taxes, the changes in Iowa income taxes and cybersecurity. A 100-page workbook will be included with registration that includes land leasing information such as surveys, sample written lease agreement and termination forms, and many other publications.

"Due to changes in commodity markets and input costs farmland owners and tenants have challenging decisions to make, and this meeting provides information to stay up to date on farmland leasing issues", says Kelvin Leibold, ISU Extension and Outreach Farm and Ag Business Management Specialist. Leibold will be the presenter at the meeting.

Pre-register by calling the Franklin County Extension and Outreach office at 641-456-4811.

Often the most pre-vailing challenge in shade gardens is the competition from trees. When gardening under trees, the soil can be quite dry, especially compared to the soil in

shady areas created by buildings, fences or other structures. The roots of established trees compete with other plants for moisture and nutrients. This can limit their growth or require you

Virus kills thousands of carp in Storm Lake

BY JARED STRONG
DISPATCH

The koi herpes virus is killing a massive number of young carp in Storm Lake, where they are washing ashore and rotting by the thousands, according to the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

It's the first time the virus — officially known as cyprinid herpesvirus 3 — has been detected in Iowa. It is not known to infect humans.

"It'll probably continue on here for a little while," Ben Wallace, a DNR fisheries biologist, said of the ongoing fish kill in northwest Iowa. "We can still see schools of stressed-out carp near shore, and all of them are exhibiting signs of the disease."

The virus was first identified about three decades ago and affects common and koi carp, according to research published by the National Library of Medicine. It has caused substantial financial losses in areas where the fish are raised to eat or for display.

That's less of a concern in Iowa, where the common carp are most often a nuisance. They can muddy waters when they forage for food and can also reduce the populations of more-desirable game fish.

The disease is very contagious and deadly. It attacks the fish's gills and can produce lesions on their bodies. Wallace said it is killing mostly young carp in Storm Lake that are up to 2 years old and between 8 and 12 inches in length. Parts of the shoreline are thick with carp carcasses.

"It smells like dead, rotting fish," he said. "The silver lining is they're all younger fish, so they're not very big. It's those large individuals that take a long time to decompose."

It's unclear how the virus arrived at Storm Lake. Wallace said outbreaks have previously been identified in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Wallace received a report about a week ago that carp were dying en masse at Storm Lake. He captured one of the infected fish and shipped it to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, which confirmed the disease on Monday.

The virus doesn't appear to be affecting other fish species at the lake, so the DNR is taking no action other than monitoring the situation, Wallace said. The disease is unlikely to eliminate the entire carp population there.

"It really hits the population hard but not to the point that it wipes them out," he said. "They'll bounce back from it."

That's why researchers and others derided a plan by the Australian government — initially dubbed "carp-aggodon" — to deliberately infect carp with the virus in the country's longest river to kill them. The plan was scrapped in 2020 after research found that the virus has limited long-term effects on carp populations.

Wallace said several people have recently suggested using the infected fish in Storm Lake for similar biological attacks on carp in other Iowa waters. That's not likely to happen, he said, because it won't be effective and is ethically dubious.

Future outbreaks at Storm Lake that result in mass carp deaths are possible, he said. The outbreaks are usually brought on by environmental stresses, such as extreme heat.

The smelly predicament at Storm Lake is being compounded by a recent algae bloom that is unrelated to the dead carp, Wallace said. DNR tests of the lake water last week did not reveal detectable amounts of algae toxins that are harmful to people. Test results for this week have not yet been revealed on the DNR's beach monitoring website.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Treasurer Fitzgerald to Launch a Statewide Treasure Hunt for Unclaimed Money

State Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald is preparing to launch the upcoming fall Great Iowa Treasure Hunt list, which will include newly added names of past and present Iowans with unclaimed funds in the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt. “Many people are surprised to find their name, or the name of someone they know on the list,” said Fitzgerald. “But having unclaimed funds, such as from a forgotten investment account or final paycheck, is actually more common than you might think.” Since Fitzgerald created it in 1983, the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt has returned more than $325 million to more than 614,000 individuals. When assets held by financial institutions go a specific period of time with no activity or contact from the owner, State law requires the institutions to turn the assets over to the Treasurer’s Office for safekeeping. It is then the Treasurer’s responsibility to locate and reunite the funds with the owner or heir, which is done through the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt. “Unclaimed property comes in many types and sizes, but the most common are savings and checking accounts, stocks, uncashed checks, life insurance policies, security deposits and safe deposit box contents,” continued Fitzgerald. “You never know what treasure you’ll find at GreatIowaTreasureHunt.gov!” You can look for the upcoming fall publication list in your local newspaper; however, there’s no need to wait. Begin your search and make a claim anytime, anywhere at GreatIowaTreasureHunt.gov. It’s free, secure and easy to use. Keep up with all of Treasurer Fitzgerald’s programs on Twitter, Instagram and Facebook.

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow

"In the beginning you laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of your hands. They will perish, but you remain; they will all wear out like a garment." - Psalm 102:25-26

We are often caught up in the ephemeral, worrying about and striving after things that are here today and gone tomorrow. How often do we worry about our cars, our houses, and our bank accounts? Those things are truly ephemeral, here today and gone tomorrow. If you doubt this, just look around you and consider how few cars are on the road which were made 30 or 40 years ago. Houses may last a bit longer than cars, but even houses and buildings, in the grand scheme of things, are transitory, here today and gone tomorrow. The eternal things are invariably intangible things like faith, hope and love. These are things which we can give and receive, but which we cannot possess in the way that one might possess a house or a car. Take the long view and focus on the eternal rather than the ephemeral. "So we fix our eyes not on what is seen, but on what is unseen, since what is seen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal." 2 Corinthians 4:18 NIV - Christopher Simon

Learn to Identify Plant and Insect Issues Found in Iowa Crops

Hands-on demonstration will allow visitors to identify plant health issues under microscope

Identifying what type of insect or plant disease is affecting your crops is a critical part in forming a response. Making the wrong decision can be costly, and may have little to no effect on the issue at hand.

To help growers improve their identification skills, plant disease and insect diagnostic specialists with Iowa State University Extension and Outreach will have displays of common insects and plant disease issues at this year's Farm Progress Show, Aug. 30-Sept. 1 in Boone.

The samples, which will be based on the current growing season, are still being determined.

Microscopes will be available and visitors can get a close-up view, while interacting with specialists who study the same insects and diseases on a daily basis.

"Every year is variable as to what we will actually see," said Ed Zaworski, plant pathologist with the Plant and Insect Diagnostic Clinic at Iowa State. "Certain diseases like certain conditions so we always talk to people about the disease triangle in plant pathology. You need three parts of a triangle to have a disease: the susceptible host, a pathogen and an optimal environment."

While farmers have many choices that can help prevent insect and disease issues, no system is ever foolproof. Good scouting is still key, followed by a prompt response plan when an issue is detected.

"When it comes to crop protection, you want to be proactive instead of reactive, but when something emerges, the next best thing is your response," said Erin Hodgson, extension specialist in entomology at Iowa State. "You want to identify what's going on, how widespread it is, and make a timely treatment that's going to protect your yield."

Zaworski and Hodgson will both be at the show helping producers identify plant health issues and answering questions.

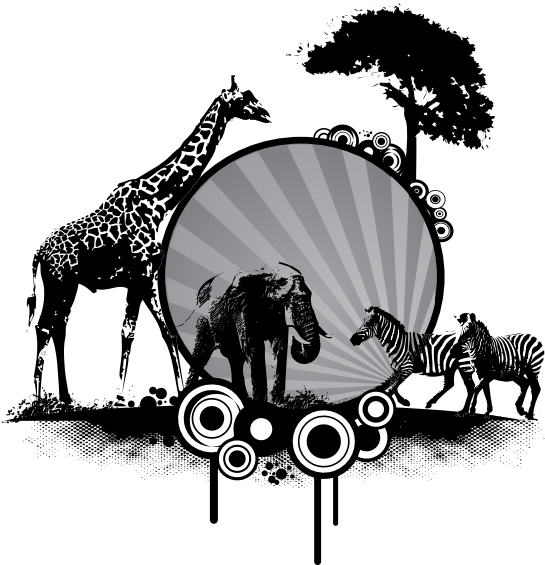

Although experienced farmers usually have a basic understanding of how to identify different pests, the display will allow them to test their skills and learn more about new and emerging pests.

Hodgson said every farmer's situation is different. Some may farm land in multiple parts of the county or state, and rely on crop consultants to diagnose plant health issues. Others do their own scouting or scout cooperatively with family members. No matter the situation or the size of the farm, it's beneficial for everyone to know what to look for and how to accurately identify the issues affecting plant health.

This is the first year for the plant health display at the Farm Progress Show, and the specialists are excited to bring this critical component to the public's eye.

"We're hoping to spread the word and the expertise of what we have here at Iowa State," said Hodgson.

Along with face-to-face time with specialists, show visitors can also learn more about extension publications related to plant health and the Crop Protection Network – a website devoted to recent publications, tools and educational resources about current crop health issues.

Zoo owners lose battle to reduce fine for contempt of court

BY CLARK KAUFFMAN
IOWA CAPITAL DISPATCH

An Iowa judge has denied a request to reduce a $70,000 fine imposed against the owners of eastern Iowa's shuttered Cricket Hollow Zoo.

In May, zoo owners Pamela and Thomas Sellner asked the court to reduce the fine they face for contempt of court. The contempt finding stems from a court ruling that the couple deliberately violated a 2019 court order that they surrender the animals at their roadside attraction in Manchester to a wildlife rescue organization.

The ruling calls for the Sellners to pay a fine of $70,000 or serve a one-day jail sentence for each animal that was not recovered from their zoo, for a total of 140 days.

The couple's attorney, Joey Hoover, said he has advised the couple to begin paying what they can to avoid jail.

"Unfortunately, we have pretty much exhausted all of our legal remedies at this point," he said, noting that Iowa Supreme Court has already declined to review the matter. "I've advised them, 'Pay what you can,' and that way the argument can't be made that they're just ignoring the judge's order."

Hoover said the Sellners "understand the reality of the situation and their plan is to do the best that they can to pay the fine."

Hoover had asked the court to modify a payment plan related to the fine or let the Sellners serve their jail sentence at home while under house arrest. The couple, he argued, was "asset rich but cash poor," and a requirement that they pay $1,000 per month toward the contempt fine would "cause significant hardship on their farm as well as their daily living expenses."

The Animal Legal Defense Fund, which helped initiate the civil case that resulted in Cricket Hollow Zoo being shut down, opposed the motion.

Iowa District Court Judge Monica Zrinyi Ackley recently ruled against the Sellners, stating that the court would not reduce the fine already imposed through its order of contempt.

With contempt orders of this kind being fairly rare, it's not clear how the case would proceed if the Sellners don't pay begin paying the $1,000 per month stipulated in the order. The contempt order from last year provided that if those payments were not made beginning in October 2021, the court would "order that the (Sellners) be taken into custody to serve the jail sentence."

Court records indicate that to date, the Sellners have not paid anything toward the court-ordered fine. In addition, the Sellners appear to owe the court system more than $4,400 in fees.

"In our experience, and from our discussions with the clerk's office, this kind of (contempt order) happens so rarely," said Brandon Underwood, one of the plaintiffs' attorneys. "We're still exploring exactly how to procedurally enforce the Sellners' obligation to either comply with the order for payment or go to jail ... Obviously, this is a fine, so it's money that belongs to the state."

The court recently denied a motion to have the Sellners pay $539,800 in attorneys' fees for the Animal Legal Defense Fund and the other plaintiffs in the case. The court has yet to rule on the plaintiffs' request for payment of $151,000 in other costs associated with the litigation.

The 2019 court order that the Sellners surrender their animals grew out of lawsuits filed by the ALDF beginning in 2016, alleging numerous violations of Iowa's animal neglect laws. Ackley eventually ordered the zoo closed with many of the animals to be relocated to wildlife sanctuaries in other states.

But when animal-rescue organizations arrived at Cricket Hollow Zoo, they found many of the animals were missing, hidden, dead or sold. That triggered the contempt-of-court proceedings.

In ruling last fall that the Sellners were in contempt, Ackley wrote that the couple's mistreatment of animals at the zoo was orchestrated and intentional, and that they "knew what they were obligated to do in order to be compliant" with her 2019 order but had instead chosen to take "deliberate action" in defiance of her order.

The missing animals included five bears, two mountain lions, a camel, a fox, a wolf, nine guinea pigs and hedgehogs, 13 lizards, seven tortoises and turtles, at least 55 birds and six kinkajous.

Iowa-licensed doctor sanctioned years after botched breast-cancer diagnoses

BY CLARK KAUFFMAN
DISPATCH

Three years after another state restricted a physician’s license for repeatedly failing to detect breast cancer in patients, the Iowa Board of Medicine has imposed similar sanctions.

Board records indicate Dr. Mark Guilfoyle is licensed in Iowa as a physician and practices diagnostic teleradiology, which involves the receipt of electronically transmitted medical images for diagnostic interpretation and consultations.

In September 2019, Guilfoyle entered into a settlement agreement with the New Hampshire Board of Medicine. That settlement stipulated that in 2018, while working at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, Guilfoyle’s interpretation of mammograms was subjected to peer review by his colleagues. While that review was underway, Guilfoyle allegedly surrendered his clinical privileges as a member of the medical staff at Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital.

Guilfoyle’s actions triggered an investigation by the New Hampshire Board of Medicine, which concluded that Guilfoyle failed to detect evidence of breast cancer in “a number of patients” who were later diagnosed with breast cancer.

As part of a settlement with New Hampshire authorities, Guilfoyle agreed to stop reading and interpreting mammograms while practicing as a New Hampshire-licensed physician. He was also issued a reprimand and was fined $750. Based on that action, other sanctions were then imposed by the states of Kentucky, Idaho, Michigan, Vermont and Washington.

The Iowa board’s action prohibits Guilfoyle from reading mammograms while practicing under his Iowa license —

although, according to the board, Guilfoyle voluntarily stopped reading mammograms five years ago.

Guilfoyle’s settlement agreement with the board indicates that he acknowledges having failed to detect breast cancer in several patients. He has asserted that some form of peer review of his work determined that his rate of cancer detection had been within an “acceptable range.”

Guilfoyle, who is now practicing diagnostic teleradiology in Michigan, declined to comment on the case.

ISU head coach Campbell answers questions during media day

BY CRAIG SHULTZ
MID AMERICA
PUBLISHING

Last Tuesday during one of the hottest days of the year, Iowa State held their yearly football media day. Dozens of media members from the world of radio, print and television flocked to Ames to talk with head coach Matt Campbell and players alike. Campbell held a press conference and answered questions along the way.

"We're excited for football season," Campbell said to start off the conference.

He first answered what's different about this season and what's the same. Campbell said the culture and what will stay the same.

"We've really doubled down since January on the state of our culture," he said. "How it impacts who we are and how we continue to grow together."

He added as they continue to grow and adapt, and with a younger team this year, it's how they're able to grow through those segments leading up to the season helps. Campbell said they've tried to have the best camp coming into this year.

He's been impressed with the new team's momentum, and it's a trait that past successful teams have had. Campbell said it'll still be a challenge, though.

Campbell discussed Xavier Hutchinson when asked regarding if he'll be a go to guy.

"I don't know if Xavier was ever a guy who surprised me with what he brought to our program," he said. "I think I had a really good understanding of what we were getting when he came here. I would say what I'm most grateful for is his approach to how he's gone about his business in terms of his own process."

Campbell said Hutchinson is great in how he practices, in the weight room and how he becomes his best. He added some of his best teams have those kinds of players who are so productive, and the younger guys can look up to someone like Hutchinson. Campbell also called him a unique player and a dynamic playmaker with a ball in his hands.

"X is a guy who can do it all," Campbell said.

Campbell was then asked about new starting quarterback, sophomore Hunter Dekkers, who is taking the reins from a four-year starter in Brock Purdy.

"I think Hunter, the thing I'm most impressed with, is the opportunities he's had over the last two years in football game experience. It's not so much hypothetical... he's had the opportunity to play the game," Campbell said. "I think those experiences, whether they were positive or not so positive, those are positive for me as a coach."

Campbell said they're excited to see Dekkers on the field, noting some of his experience on the field playing at Oklahoma last year. He also heaped praise on Dekkers' physical ability, but is looking forward to seeing his growth outside of those abilities. There are positives and thinks Dekkers has to keep being positive to move forward in that starting role.

It was asked if Dekkers has confidence from his teammates and Campbell said he's been earning that trust from everyone in that program. Campbell even went back to Kyle Kempt to bring up how much trust his quarterbacks have had. He also noted Dekkers really zoned in and learned from Purdy over the last couple of years to be ready. Campbell saw how Dekkers has grown as a leader through the spring and summer practices.

Noting Dekkers' arm strength, it was also asked if Iowa State will throw downfield more. Campbell noted they did have the top passing offense last year in the Big 12, and said they will use the talent they have available to use those pieces in the best position.

"It's how you try to go win the game," he said. "I think our staff and our guys have done a phenomenal job of that."

Defensive end Will McDonald coming back for his senior year was brought up. Campbell said he could've gone either way and there were two important things: Finishing his degree and becoming the first person to graduate with a degree in his family and consistently getting to become one of the best defensive linemen in the county.

"I would tell you we're really proud of Will," Campbell said.

Campbell said they will continue to try to put McDonald in the right position as the season goes on. He also likes the rest of the defensive line and what they're able to bring to the table to go alongside McDonald.

The running back room is brought up with having to replace the talent of Breece Hall. Campbell said that position group is one of the best they've ever had from top to bottom, and he doesn't mean it as a slight to past groups.

"We're as healthy and competitive as we've ever been at the running back position," he said. "I think there's great competition and that will evolve through fall camp. You hope it reveals itself."

He added they'll take as long as it takes, and they'll go by committee or go with one guy as it shakes out.

Campbell also said the cornerback position is as healthy as it's been in years. He likes having good depth in today's era of football, and how multiple they can be.

"There's a lot of guys who have played a lot of football in that group," he said. "They're all hitting the right time in their career."

He mentioned Darien Porter and how he's grown and where he's at through his time at Iowa State. They want to get him on the field more, and he's taken the ball and ran with it through the offseason. TJ Tampa, who has had great moments, is looking to be more consistent to bring his game up a little bit. Myles Purchase, who got six games last year as a true freshman, will continue to see the field. Tayvonn Kyle has seen a good deal of football and has been having the best 11 months of his career.

To determine who sees the field early on, Campbell said the first item they evaluate is if they trust them or not. He said there are a lot of ways they can go with a trust factor with their physical, mental abilities. The second is the ability to do their job.

"You have to do your one/eleventh, and if you don't do your job, we're probably going to get beat," he said.

He also wants them to make plays in their system too. But those two first factors are vital to Campbell and his program.

Campbell also mentioned the kicker position is up for grabs and the competition has been fierce for it as they try to replace Andrew Mevis. There are three players trying to get the kicking duties and will continue to battle for it through camp.

Campbell talked about offensive lineman Tyler Miller, and thinks he can be a fixture at left tackle for quite a few years. He also mentioned Trevor Downing at center and Campbell feels it's one of the most important positions on the team. He said his center has to be highly intelligent and when talent at the position is at a high end, it helps the rest of the line.

"We are going to play the best players who show those qualities we want," Campbell said. "We owe it to the team to play the right players. We also have to make those adjustments and our kids understand that."

Iowa State starts the season at home on September 3 against Southeast Missouri.

Engineers, contractors, and chamber members are looking forward to the next step in the development of “Peace Plaza” in downtown Hampton.

Bids go out for Peace Plaza

BY TRAVIS FISCHER

The Greater Franklin County Chamber of Commerce is moving forward on a new development in downtown Hampton.

Working with Atura Architecture, bids are going out for a renovation of the vacant downtown lot that will transform it from an empty lot of grass into a small community patio.

“The bid process will happen within the next couple weeks,” said Julie Salvesen, who has been working towards this project for two years.

“We want it to be done right.”

Once finished, “Peace Plaza” will feature a paved seating area and a shelter that can host small events or just offer a place for downtown visitors to enjoy the outdoors.

Contractors will be focusing on local businesses to do the work and Atura will be reviewing bids on August 23.

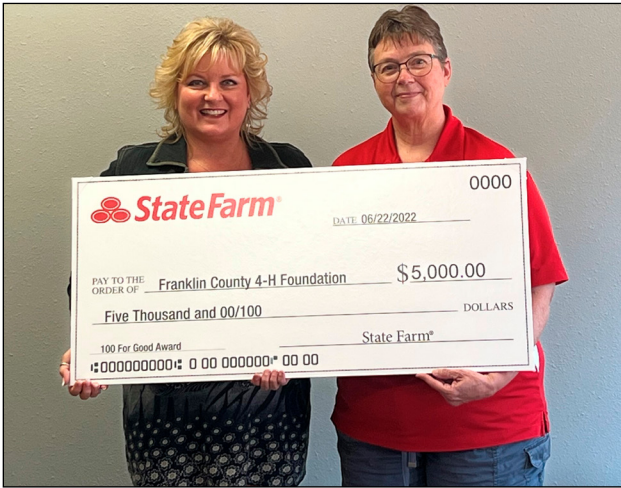

“We’re hoping the project starts in late fall or early next year,” said Chamber Director Bill Hittle.

“At State Farm, we are committed to helping build stronger communities,” says Holly, who supports them personally and understands how 4-H organizations positively impact youth. “For me, it’s not enough to simply say we’re a Good Neighbor, we embrace the responsibility to make our community better by being a part of a solution.”

“We’re grateful to Holly and State Farm for this grant!” says Jackie Dohman, County Youth Coordinator, Franklin County 4-H. “The funds are being put to good use assisting Franklin County 4-H in promoting our programs and providing additional scholarships to our members to attend Regional and State 4-H events.”

Library Fun Fact: When they opened the time capsule in 2020, Miss Frieda Blum wrote "The Future, Many larger libraries today are using a library catalog printed by a computer and available to the patrons instead of the card catalog which has been in use since the beginning of this library. Also many newspapers and magazines are available on microfilm. One wonders if the library of 2020 will not be almost entirely a library of micro-filmed and the shelving as we know them today will not then be antiques. Also one wonders if the Carnegie Library dedicated in 1905 and housing the present library will still be standing and used as a library. No doubt there will be many innovations in library work which are not even dreamed of now." Yes, Miss Blum this lovely Carnegie building is still standing and still used as a library. And No, the shelves are not empty!

Yard and Garden: Create Great Shade Gardens

Shade gardens are great places to be on hot summer days. Many plants are well-suited for shady gardens – and hostas aren’t the only options. Iowa State University Extension and Outreach horticulturists answer common questions about selecting the best plants to grow in the shade and the care recommendations you need to create great shade gardens.

Which perennials grow well in shady locations?

Perennials are great choices for creating an attractive garden that comes back year after year. Be sure to select a variety of species that bloom at different times of the year to provide season-long color. Perennials that are good choices for partially to heavily shaded locations include black snakeroot (Actaea racemosa), red baneberry (Actaea rubra), lady’s mantle (Alchemilla mollis), astilbe (Astilbe spp.), Japanese painted fern (Athyrium niponicum var. pictum), heartleaf brunnera (Brunnera macrophylla), bleeding heart (Lamprocapnos spectabilis), Japanese forest grass (Hakonechloa macra), hosta (Hosta spp.), crested iris (Iris cristata), creeping phlox (Phlox stolonifera), Jacob’s ladder (Polemonium caeruleum), lungwort (Pulmonaria spp.), celandine poppy (Stylophorum diphyllum) and toad lily (Tricyrtis spp.).

What are some good native perennials for a shady site?

When selecting plants for the shade garden, one group of plants that is often overlooked are native woodland wildflowers. Since they are native to the state, woodland wildflowers are well adapted to the area. They are easy to grow and perform well when given a favorable environment.

Native woodland wildflowers that make good additions to the home landscape include wild columbine (Aquilegia canadensis), Jack-in-the-pulpit (Arisaema triphyllum), goat’s beard (Aruncus dioicus), Canadian wild ginger (Asarum canadense), Dutchman’s breeches (Dicentra cucullaria), shooting star (Dodecatheon meadia), false Solomon’s seal (Maianthemum racemosum), Virginia bluebells (Mertensia virginica), woodland phlox (Phlox divaricata), May apple (Podophyllum peltatum), Solomon’s seal (Polygonatum biflorum), bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis), trillium (Trillium spp.), merrybells (Uvularia grandiflora) and others.

Obtaining plants is easy. Woodland wildflowers are readily available at garden centers and mail-order nurseries. Do not remove plants from natural woodland areas.

Which native ferns are suitable for the home landscape?

Ferns are great additions to shade gardens and they pair nicely with woodland wildflowers and spring flowering bulbs. As these plants bloom early in the spring and often disappear by midsummer, they leave empty spaces for ferns to expand into during the summer months. Ferns are often fine-textured perennials that also combine nicely with other more coarse-leaved plants like hosta. Most ferns perform best in moist soils in partial to heavy shade

Iowa native ferns that are good additions to shady locations in the home landscape include lady fern (Athyrium filix-femina), sensitive fern (Onoclea sensibilis), ostrich fern (Matteuccia struthiopteris), cinnamon fern (Osmunda cinnamomeum), Christmas fern (Polystichum acrostichoides), interrupted fern (Osmunda claytoniana) and northern maidenhair fern (Adiantum pedatum).

What are some good annuals for shady garden areas?

Annuals are a great way to introduce color to a shade garden. Annuals that can be successfully grown in shady areas include wax begonia (Begonia × semperflorens-cultorum), impatiens (Impatiens walleriana), lobelia (Lobelia erinus), coleus (Solenostemon scutellarioides), wishbone flower (Torrenia fournieri), polka dot plant (Hypoestes phyllostachya) and pansy (Viola × wittrockiana).

Which shrubs will grow in shade?

Shrubs are a great way to give height and structure to shade gardens since most perennials and annuals grown in shady locations tend to be shorter than 2 feet tall. Woody shrubs do best in partial shade locations for ferns that receive two to four hours of direct sun a day. Shrubs that can be successfully grown in partial shade include fothergilla (Fothergilla spp.), smooth hydrangea (Hydrangea arborescens), oakleaf hydrangea (Hydrangea quercifolia), Virginia sweetspire (Itea virginica), Japanese kerria (Kerria japonica), alpine currant (Ribes alpinum), arborvitae (Thuja spp.), hybrid yew (Taxus × media) and Russian cypress (Microbiota decussata).

Iowa native shrubs that can be successfully grown in partial shade include serviceberry (Amelanchier arborea), pagoda dogwood (Cornus alternifolia), gray dogwood (Cornus racemosa), bush honeysuckle (Diervilla lonicera), common witch hazel (Hamamelis virginiana), arrowwood viburnum (Viburnum dentatum), nannyberry (Viburnum lentago), American cranberrybush viburnum (Viburnum opulus var. americanum) and Canadian yew (Taxus canadensis).

Iowa Attorney General’s Office investigates scammer calls

KATE KEALEY
DISPATCH

Iowa’s attorney general’s office, along with 50 other attorney generals, has formed a task force aimed at curtailing illegal robocalls in the United States. The task force’s focus is to investigate and shut down telecommunications providers that profit from failing to stop the illegal scam calls.

Over 33 million scam robocalls are made to Americans every day, according to the National Consumer Law Center and Electronic Privacy Information Center. In 2020, there was a decrease in scam calls due to the pandemic.

Scam calls are now on the rise again, resulting in more than 1,500 calls per second, according to AARP.

The Anti-Robocall Litigation Task Force has issued 20 civil investigative demands to 20 entities allegedly making foreign scam calls. Roughly $29.8 billion was stolen through robocalls in 2021 alone, according to a press release from the Iowa Attorney General’s Office.

“Robocalls aren’t just an Iowa problem,” Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller stated in a press release. “They are a nationwide problem. That is why I am proud to join my fellow attorneys general. We will take this fight to anyone who helps these scammers and robocallers. If the telecom industry won’t police itself, the Task Force will.” Imposter scams, which include phone calls, emails and social media posts, had the third highest number of complaints to the Iowa Attorney

General’s Office in 2021. As of 2022, 146 million robocalls have taken place in Iowa, equaling an estimated 50 calls per targeted person, according to Robocall Index.

The callers often fraudulently present themselves as the Social Security Administration or Amazon, during which the caller will ask consumers to make a payment through a gift card, wire transfer or cryptocurrency. Many of the scams target seniors and other vulnerable populations. The Social Security Administration typically contacts individuals through the mail if there are problems with an account as opposed to over the phone.

According to the Social Security Administration’s website, employees will never promise benefits in exchange for personal information or money. The Iowa Attorney General’s Office recommends vigilance against prerecorded calls pretending to be government agencies.

Service providers are improving blocking and labeling resources to help consumers avoid scam calls. Consumers can also register to call blocking services with their cellphone providers. The Federal Communications Commission provides a list of tools for anyone experiencing unwanted scam calls.

Consumers are encouraged to report robocall complaints to the Consumer Protection Division at consumer@ag.iowa.gov or by phone at 515-281-5926 or 888-777-4590.

Small Shops, Big Experiences

You know that feeling when, purely by happenstance, you find yourself walking through the door of a charming storefront with a creative name on a three-block Main Street in a town you’ve never visited, and its, for lack of a better word, magic? Just entering the place makes you feel like you’ve found a secret portal to a wonderland! A Narnia-esque oasis positively overflowing with personality from the window displays to the person who greets you warmly. Who, you’ll often find, may well be the owner, and not always even the first generation, and can talk all day about what the store has to offer. That experience, and the warm fuzzies we get from it, is baked right into the recipe of small-town specialty shops. From antiques and collectibles to funky boutiques to bookstores and anything in between.

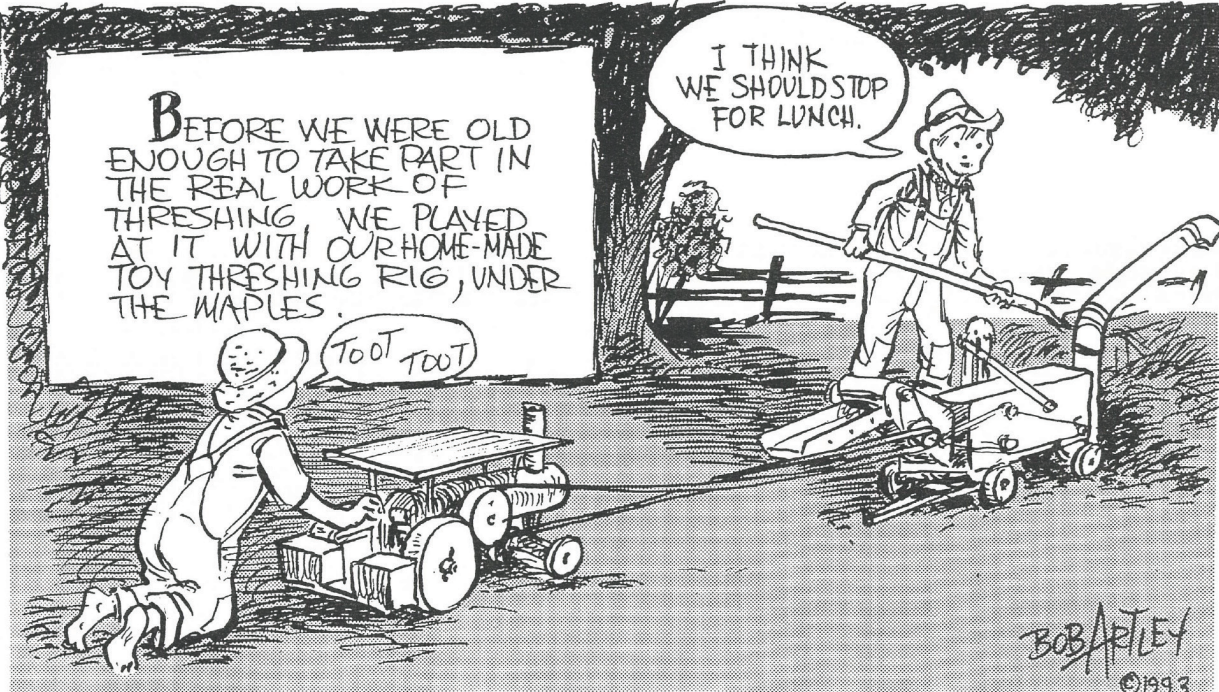

Small businesses, and specifically small businesses in small towns, just have that “it” factor.

Where I live in rural Iowa, we have a vintage vinyl record shop with an inventory of over 10,000 albums and pop culture collectibles of every sort, which is directly across the street from a Mid Century Modern-focused vintage and retro home décor shop that pulls clientele from all over the country. And these are just two of the unique specialty shops on our Main Street. Businesses like these offer an enviable combination of exceptional inventory and enchanting experiences, and do you know who envies that combination the most? Big box businesses and online marketplaces.

Large chain stores and online sellers can do a lot of things, but what nearly all of them struggle with is providing the magic. When you walk into a massive variety store or shop online, you will probably find what you need, but you will rarely (never, if you shop solely online) find a smiling face behind the counter who is positively thrilled to see you and incurably obsessed with the products and services they offer.

These days, after a few years of limited experiences and ample solitude, people are absolutely clamoring for new, positive experiences, and here’s the thing: you are more likely to create a magical experience by veering off the beaten path, down the gravel roads, and into the hidden gems that small towns have to offer. There is a name for it and everything. It’s called “destination shopping,” and it’s a big deal! There are now whole destination shopping trails and planned events popping up all over the place based on peoples’ particular interests. The idea is to take a day or, better yet, a weekend or longer, and follow the trail to shops that fit your interests. You can get maps and resources, and all you need to do to see if there’s one near you is a web search for your state, shopping interest, and something like “trail” or “network.” You can also call Chambers of Commerce or Tourism and Visitors Bureaus in the area you’d like to visit, and they will be able to get you headed in the right direction.

Lastly, if you’re lucky enough to live in a small town that has at least one of these magical wonderland specialty shops, for goodness sake GO INTO THEM! Even if it’s not your “thing”. Your town needs small and unique retail. Specialty businesses help attract workforce and visitors, contribute to the personality of your community and I hope you know these businesses are consistently the biggest sponsors, advocates, and supporters of things like local

The Senate passed the $280 billion “Chips For America” bill. Well intentioned, but I think there are unfortunate unintended consequences down the road.

In Farm Show Magazine there was an entry about a farmer with a General Motors pickup that sits waiting for parts to honor a warranty claim concerning a DEF (diesel exhaust fluid) problem that crippled its Isuzu V6. In my experience whenever I see an approaching pickup with one light out it identifies it as General Motors.

I have a friend who swore he would never buy another General Motors product because of the bailout in 2008. This particular guy went broke with his excavating business during the 1980s Farm Crisis. But he didn’t declare bankruptcy. He worked and paid every single creditor who had trusted him.

General Motors made a faulty ignition switch that ultimately cost 124 people their lives when their cars unexpectedly went out of control. GM got a slap on the wrist even though they tried to cover up their mistake beginning in 2001.

The drone of underpaid and abused workers we hear from unions just might be true after all. A big chunk of their paychecks goes to enable mismanagement at the corporate level similar to a parent enabling a dope or video-game addict. Whether through inflation or taxation, we pay for shoddy products and poor business decisions with subsidies and mandates. I wonder, are these bailouts planned ahead of time by crony capitalists and their congressional pets, or are they just plain dumb?

In the “bailout-plan” column is the Ukrainian war and the Covid 19 pandemic. Ukraine has zero strategic value for the United States, yet tens of billions of American workers’ hard earned cash now reside in the pockets of so-called defense contractors. Russia’s defense budget is only 13% of the United States’ defense budget. Yet gullible consumers of corporate propaganda actually believe Russia is on a march to rule the world.

With actual fatalities similar to those from a bad flu, pharmaceutical companies are fleecing the working class with a constant stream of vaccines that don’t work and have a largely unreported record of terrible, adverse reactions. Moderna and Pfizer are featured in the Wall Street Journal driving up real estate values with their executives and workers on a buying spree of penthouses and mansions.

The traditional bashing of welfare cheats dissolved to some extent when Republicans knelt before Bill Clinton, praising him for his welfare reform. Interestingly, there was a huge increase in bad backs and mental illness accompanied by Social Security Disability checks about that time. But corporate welfare has these unfortunate individuals beat hands down.

Joni Ernst and Chuck Grassley have joined Bernie Sanders (Democratic posterboy for stolen elections) in a losing effort to defeat “Chips For America.” This bill has to be one of the biggest rewards for incompetence ever invented.

This kind of thing is what really adds up to recession, which recent GDP data indicate we are in right now. Wage gains are 4% behind the inflation rate, an indicator of increasing wealth disparity between rich and poor. That disparity is facilitated by corporate welfare as in “Chips For America.”

When people like Grassley, Ernst, and Sanders prove their commitment to America by further letting working families keep what they earn, recession will self-correct.

In 1920 there was a sharper downturn in the economy than the one in 1929. President Warren Harding drastically reduced the size of the federal government. After a year and a half of sorting out waste America had one of the most prosperous decades in its history. Contrast that with Hoover’s and Roosevelt’s numerous programs for helping put Americans to work. But where did they lead? The Great Depression for 16 years.

A tale of two cons

AGE OF THE GEEK
Travis Fischer

I must have caught the travel bug because I’ve been back in the Central Standard Time zone for less than a week and I’m already set to take off again.

Within days of returning from Comic-Con, tickets for TwitchCon went on sale. Coincidentally, both conventions happen in San Diego, so I’ll be returning to the west coast this October to the very same convention center.

Maybe I’m just making up for lost time. Last July was the first time I’d been back to the San Diego Convention Center since 2018. Normally, I only take one vacation a year, but I think that my perspective on things has changed a bit since the pandemic. Carpe diem and all that.

Fortunately, the travel bug seems to be the only thing I’ve caught thus far.

One would think that, considering the last two years, Comic-Con couldn’t possibly be anything but a COVID-19 super spreader event. Quite frankly, the risk factor seems absurdly high. Five days of 100,000+ people from all corners of the country packing into lines and rooms for hours upon end. Most of them having gotten there by navigating crowded airports and sitting in metal tubes with re-circulated air.

The result: Of the hundred or so people in my Comic-Con line waiting group, at least four walked away from the convention with a confirmed case of COVID-19. It’s a testament to the power of vaccines that I didn’t catch a case myself as I had prolonged exposure to three of them at various points during the convention.

All things considered, I would say it was an acceptable result. Yes, people got sick and were down for a few days after the convention, but that was a pretty regular occurrence before the pandemic.

Con-Crud has been around forever. There have been several times over the years that I’ve come home from San Diego with a nasty cough.

But will TwitchCon foster the same result?

Comic-Con took some pretty reasonable precautions to mitigate the spread of illness during the convention. Along with an indoor mask mandate, every attendee had to demonstrate proof of either vaccination or a negative COVID test. It’s debatable how effective the former policy was, but the latter at least stacked the deck by limiting the pool of people to those least likely to catch or spread the virus.

TwitchCon, as of now, is not applying either policy.

If I were to guess, I’d say that the lack of a mask mandate is a visibility issue. TwitchCon is a convention of people that broadcast themselves across the internet. They want faces and clean audio, neither of which are very compatible with masks.

As for vaccination verification, I presume that’s simply a cost-saving matter that Twitch, or their Amazon parent company, simply did not want to spring for.

A lot of people aren’t happy about this, and I’d certainly prefer if they too applied the same policies that Comic-Con did, but I have to admit that the science enthusiast in me is curious about how things will turn out.

Granted, it’s not a perfect comparison. Same convention center and probably a reasonable crossover of demographics, but TwitchCon is both a smaller and shorter affair than Comic-Con, so it has that in its favor when it comes to mitigating spread.

And while I’m not super thrilled about the idea of taking part in this experiment, I suppose I’ve pressed my luck thus far. May as well go all the way.

Carpe diem and all that.

Often the most pre-vailing challenge in shade gardens is the competition from trees. When gardening under trees, the soil can be quite dry, especially compared to the soil in shady areas created by buildings, fences or other structures. The roots of established trees compete with other plants for moisture and nutrients. This can limit their growth or require you

Virus kills thousands of carp in Storm Lake

BY JARED STRONG
IOWA CAPITAL DISPATCH

The koi herpes virus is killing a massive number of young carp in Storm Lake, where they are washing ashore and rotting by the thousands, according to the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

It's the first time the virus — officially known as cyprinid herpesvirus 3 — has been detected in Iowa. It is not known to infect humans.

“It'll probably continue on here for a little while,” Ben Wallace, a DNR fisheries biologist, said of the ongoing fish kill in northwest Iowa. “We can still see schools of stressed-out carp near shore, and all of them are exhibiting signs of the disease.”

The virus was first identified about three decades ago and affects common and koi carp, according to research published by the National Library of Medicine. It has caused substantial financial losses in areas where the fish are raised to eat or for display.

That's less of a concern in Iowa, where the common carp are most often a nuisance. They can muddy waters when they forage for food and can also reduce the populations of more-desirable game fish.

The disease is very contagious and deadly. It attacks the fish's gills and can produce lesions on their bodies. Wallace said it is killing mostly young carp in Storm Lake that are up to 2 years old and between 8 and 12 inches in length. Parts of the shoreline are thick with carp carcasses.

“It smells like dead, rotting fish,” he said. “The silver lining is they're all younger fish, so they're not very big. It's those large individuals that take a long time to decompose.”

It's unclear how the virus arrived at Storm Lake. Wallace said outbreaks have previously been identified in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Wallace received a report about a week ago that carp were dying en masse at Storm Lake. He captured one of the infected fish and shipped it to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, which confirmed the disease on Monday.

The virus doesn't appear to be affecting other fish species at the lake, so the DNR is taking no action other than monitoring the situation, Wallace said. The disease is unlikely to eliminate the entire carp population there.

“It really hits the population hard but not to the point that it wipes them out,” he said. “They'll bounce back from it.”

That's why researchers and others derided a plan by the Australian government — initially dubbed “carp-aggodon” — to deliberately infect carp with the virus in the country's longest river to kill them. The plan was scrapped in 2020 after research found that the virus has limited long-term effects on carp populations.

Wallace said several people have recently suggested using the infected fish in Storm Lake for similar biological attacks on carp in other Iowa waters. That's not likely to happen, he said, because it won't be effective and is ethically dubious.

Future outbreaks at Storm Lake that result in mass carp deaths are possible, he said. The outbreaks are usually brought on by environmental stresses, such as extreme heat.

The smelly predicament at Storm Lake is being compounded by a recent algae bloom that is unrelated to the dead carp, Wallace said. DNR tests of the lake water last week did not reveal detectable amounts of algae toxins that are harmful to people. Test results for this week have not yet been revealed on the DNR's beach monitoring website.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Treasurer Fitzgerald to Launch a Statewide Treasure Hunt for Unclaimed Money

State Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald is preparing to launch the upcoming fall Great Iowa Treasure Hunt list, which will include newly added names of past and present Iowans with unclaimed funds in the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt. “Many people are surprised to find their name, or the name of someone they know on the list,” said Fitzgerald. “But having unclaimed funds, such as from a forgotten investment account or final paycheck, is actually more common than you might think.” Since Fitzgerald created it in 1983, the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt has returned more than $325 million to more than 614,000 individuals. When assets held by financial institutions go a specific period of time with no activity or contact from the owner, State law requires the institutions to turn the assets over to the Treasurer’s Office for safekeeping. It is then the Treasurer’s responsibility to locate and reunite the funds with the owner or heir, which is done through the Great Iowa Treasure Hunt. “Unclaimed property comes in many types and sizes, but the most common are savings and checking accounts, stocks, uncashed checks, life insurance policies, security deposits and safe deposit box contents,” continued Fitzgerald. “You never know what treasure you’ll find at GreatIowaTreasureHunt.gov!” You can look for the upcoming fall publication list in your local newspaper; however, there’s no need to wait. Begin your search and make a claim anytime, anywhere at GreatIowaTreasureHunt.gov. It’s free, secure and easy to use. Keep up with all of Treasurer Fitzgerald’s programs on Twitter, Instagram and Facebook.

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow

"In the beginning you laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of your hands. They will perish, but you remain; they will all wear out like a garment." - Psalm 102:25-26

We are often caught up in the ephemeral, worrying about and striving after things that are here today and gone tomorrow. How often do we worry about our cars, our houses, and our bank accounts? Those things are truly ephemeral, here today and gone tomorrow. If you doubt this, just look around you and consider how few cars are on the road which were made 30 or 40 years ago. Houses may last a bit longer than cars, but even houses and buildings, in the grand scheme of things, are transitory, here today and gone tomorrow. The eternal things are invariably intangible things like faith, hope and love. These are things which we can give and receive, but which we cannot possess in the way that one might possess a house or a car. Take the long view and focus on the eternal rather than the ephemeral. "So we fix our eyes not on what is seen, but on what is unseen, since what is seen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal." 2 Corinthians 4:18 NIV - Christopher Simon

Learn to Identify Plant and Insect Issues Found in Iowa Crops

Hands-on demonstration will allow visitors to identify plant health issues under microscope

Identifying what type of insect or plant disease is affecting your crops is a critical part in forming a response. Making the wrong decision can be costly, and may have little to no effect on the issue at hand.

To help growers improve their identification skills, plant disease and insect diagnostic specialists with Iowa State University Extension and Outreach will have displays of common insects and plant disease issues at this year's Farm Progress Show, Aug. 30-Sept. 1 in Boone.

The samples, which will be based on the current growing season, are still being determined.

Microscopes will be available and visitors can get a close-up view, while interacting with specialists who study the same insects and diseases on a daily basis.

"Every year is variable as to what we will actually see," said Ed Zaworski, plant pathologist with the Plant and Insect Diagnostic Clinic at Iowa State. "Certain diseases like certain conditions so we always talk to people about the disease triangle in plant pathology. You need three parts of a triangle to have a disease: the susceptible host, a pathogen and an optimal environment."

While farmers have many choices that can help prevent insect and disease issues, no system is ever foolproof. Good scouting is still key, followed by a prompt response plan when an issue is detected.

"When it comes to crop protection, you want to be proactive instead of reactive, but when something emerges, the next best thing is your response," said Erin Hodgson, extension specialist in entomology at Iowa State. "You want to identify what's going on, how widespread it is, and make a timely treatment that's going to protect your yield."

Zaworski and Hodgson will both be at the show helping producers identify plant health issues and answering questions.

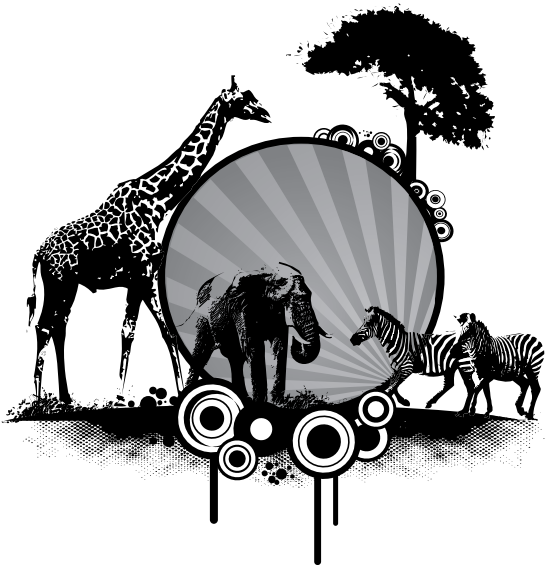

Although experienced farmers usually have a basic understanding of how to identify different pests, the display will allow them to test their skills and learn more about new and emerging pests.

Hodgson said every farmer's situation is different. Some may farm land in multiple parts of the county or state, and rely on crop consultants to diagnose plant health issues. Others do their own scouting or scout cooperatively with family members. No matter the situation or the size of the farm, it's beneficial for everyone to know what to look for and how to accurately identify the issues affecting plant health.

This is the first year for the plant health display at the Farm Progress Show, and the specialists are excited to bring this critical component to the public's eye.

"We're hoping to spread the word and the expertise of what we have here at Iowa State," said Hodgson.

Along with face-to-face time with specialists, show visitors can also learn more about extension publications related to plant health and the Crop Protection Network – a website devoted to recent publications, tools and educational resources about current crop health issues.

Zoo owners lose battle to reduce fine for contempt of court

BY CLARK KAUFFMAN
IOWA CAPITAL DISPATCH

An Iowa judge has denied a request to reduce a $70,000 fine imposed against the owners of eastern Iowa's shuttered Cricket Hollow Zoo.

In May, zoo owners Pamela and Thomas Sellner asked the court to reduce the fine they face for contempt of court. The contempt finding stems from a court ruling that the couple deliberately violated a 2019 court order that they surrender the animals at their roadside attraction in Manchester to a wildlife rescue organization.

The ruling calls for the Sellners to pay a fine of $70,000 or serve a one-day jail sentence for each animal that was not recovered from their zoo, for a total of 140 days.

The couple's attorney, Joey Hoover, said he has advised the couple to begin paying what they can to avoid jail.

"Unfortunately, we have pretty much exhausted all of our legal remedies at this point," he said, noting that Iowa Supreme Court has already declined to review the matter. "I've advised them, 'Pay what you can,' and that way the argument can't be made that they're just ignoring the judge's order."

Hoover said the Sellners "understand the reality of the situation and their plan is to do the best that they can to pay the fine."

Hoover had asked the court to modify a payment plan related to the fine or let the Sellners serve their jail sentence at home while under house arrest. The couple, he argued, was "asset rich but cash poor," and a requirement that they pay $1,000 per month toward the contempt fine would "cause significant hardship on their farm as well as their daily living expenses."

The Animal Legal Defense Fund, which helped initiate the civil case that resulted in Cricket Hollow Zoo being shut down, opposed the motion.

Iowa District Court Judge Monica Zrinyi Ackley recently ruled against the Sellners, stating that the court would not reduce the fine already imposed through its order of contempt.

With contempt orders of this kind being fairly rare, it's not clear how the case would proceed if the Sellners don't pay begin paying the $1,000 per month stipulated in the order. The contempt order from last year provided that if those payments were not made beginning in October 2021, the court would "order that the (Sellners) be taken into custody to serve the jail sentence."

Court records indicate that to date, the Sellners have not paid anything toward the court-ordered fine. In addition, the Sellners appear to owe the court system more than $4,400 in fees.

"In our experience, and from our discussions with the clerk's office, this kind of (contempt order) happens so rarely," said Brandon Underwood, one of the plaintiffs' attorneys. "We're still exploring exactly how to procedurally enforce the Sellners' obligation to either comply with the order for payment or go to jail ... Obviously, this is a fine, so it's money that belongs to the state."

The court recently denied a motion to have the Sellners pay $539,800 in attorneys' fees for the Animal Legal Defense Fund and the other plaintiffs in the case. The court has yet to rule on the plaintiffs' request for payment of $151,000 in other costs associated with the litigation.

The 2019 court order that the Sellners surrender their animals grew out of lawsuits filed by the ALDF beginning in 2016, alleging numerous violations of Iowa's animal neglect laws. Ackley eventually ordered the zoo closed with many of the animals to be relocated to wildlife sanctuaries in other states.

But when animal-rescue organizations arrived at Cricket Hollow Zoo, they found many of the animals were missing, hidden, dead or sold. That triggered the contempt-of-court proceedings.

In ruling last fall that the Sellners were in contempt, Ackley wrote that the couple's mistreatment of animals at the zoo was orchestrated and intentional, and that they "knew what they were obligated to do in order to be compliant" with her 2019 order but had instead chosen to take "deliberate action" in defiance of her order.

The missing animals included five bears, two mountain lions, a camel, a fox, a wolf, nine guinea pigs and hedgehogs, 13 lizards, seven tortoises and turtles, at least 55 birds and six kinkajous.

Iowa-licensed doctor sanctioned years after botched breast-cancer diagnoses

BY CLARK KAUFFMAN
DISPATCH

Three years after another state restricted a physician’s license for repeatedly failing to detect breast cancer in patients, the Iowa Board of Medicine has imposed similar sanctions.

Board records indicate Dr. Mark Guilfoyle is licensed in Iowa as a physician and practices diagnostic teleradiology, which involves the receipt of electronically transmitted medical images for diagnostic interpretation and consultations.

In September 2019, Guilfoyle entered into a settlement agreement with the New Hampshire Board of Medicine. That settlement stipulated that in 2018, while working at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, Guilfoyle’s interpretation of mammograms was subjected to peer review by his colleagues. While that review was underway, Guilfoyle allegedly surrendered his clinical privileges as a member of the medical staff at Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital.

Guilfoyle’s actions triggered an investigation by the New Hampshire Board of Medicine, which concluded that Guilfoyle failed to detect evidence of breast cancer in “a number of patients” who were later diagnosed with breast cancer.

As part of a settlement with New Hampshire authorities, Guilfoyle agreed to stop reading and interpreting mammograms while practicing as a New Hampshire-licensed physician. He was also issued a reprimand and was fined $750. Based on that action, other sanctions were then imposed by the states of Kentucky, Idaho, Michigan, Vermont and Washington.

The Iowa board’s action prohibits Guilfoyle from reading mammograms while practicing under his Iowa license —

although, according to the board, Guilfoyle voluntarily stopped reading mammograms five years ago.

Guilfoyle’s settlement agreement with the board indicates that he acknowledges having failed to detect breast cancer in several patients. He has asserted that some form of peer review of his work determined that his rate of cancer detection had been within an “acceptable range.”

Guilfoyle, who is now practicing diagnostic teleradiology in Michigan, declined to comment on the case.

ISU head coach Campbell answers questions during media day

BY CRAIG SHULTZ
MID AMERICA
PUBLISHING

Last Tuesday during one of the hottest days of the year, Iowa State held their yearly football media day. Dozens of media members from the world of radio, print and television flocked to Ames to talk with head coach Matt Campbell and players alike. Campbell held a press conference and answered questions along the way.

"We're excited for football season," Campbell said to start off the conference.

He first answered what's different about this season and what's the same. Campbell said the culture and what will stay the same.

"We've really doubled down since January on the state of our culture," he said. "How it impacts who we are and how we continue to grow together."

He added as they continue to grow and adapt, and with a younger team this year, it's how they're able to grow through those segments leading up to the season helps. Campbell said they've tried to have the best camp coming into this year.

He's been impressed with the new team's momentum, and it's a trait that past successful teams have had. Campbell said it'll still be a challenge, though.

Campbell discussed Xavier Hutchinson when asked regarding if he'll be a go to guy.

"I don't know if Xavier was ever a guy who surprised me with what he brought to our program," he said. "I think I had a really good understanding of what we were getting when he came here. I would say what I'm most grateful for is his approach to how he's gone about his business in terms of his own process."

Campbell said Hutchinson is great in how he practices, in the weight room and how he becomes his best. He added some of his best teams have those kinds of players who are so productive, and the younger guys can look up to someone like Hutchinson. Campbell also called him a unique player and a dynamic playmaker with a ball in his hands.

"X is a guy who can do it all," Campbell said.

Campbell was then asked about new starting quarterback, sophomore Hunter Dekkers, who is taking the reins from a four-year starter in Brock Purdy.

"I think Hunter, the thing I'm most impressed with, is the opportunities he's had over the last two years in football game experience. It's not so much hypothetical... he's had the opportunity to play the game," Campbell said. "I think those experiences, whether they were positive or not so positive, those are positive for me as a coach."

Campbell said they're excited to see Dekkers on the field, noting some of his experience on the field playing at Oklahoma last year. He also heaped praise on Dekkers' physical ability, but is looking forward to seeing his growth outside of those abilities. There are positives and thinks Dekkers has to keep being positive to move forward in that starting role.

It was asked if Dekkers has confidence from his teammates and Campbell said he's been earning that trust from everyone in that program. Campbell even went back to Kyle Kempt to bring up how much trust his quarterbacks have had. He also noted Dekkers really zoned in and learned from Purdy over the last couple of years to be ready. Campbell saw how Dekkers has grown as a leader through the spring and summer practices.

Noting Dekkers' arm strength, it was also asked if Iowa State will throw downfield more. Campbell noted they did have the top passing offense last year in the Big 12, and said they will use the talent they have available to use those pieces in the best position.

Defensive end Will McDonald coming back for his senior year was brought up. Campbell said he could've gone either way and there were two important things: Finishing his degree and becoming the first person to graduate with a degree in his family and consistently getting to become one of the best defensive linemen in the county.

"I would tell you we're really proud of Will," Campbell said.

Campbell said they will continue to try to put McDonald in the right position as the season goes on. He also likes the rest of the defensive line and what they're able to bring to the table to go alongside McDonald.

The running back room is brought up with having to replace the talent of Breece Hall. Campbell said that position group is one of the best they've ever had from top to bottom, and he doesn't mean it as a slight to past groups.

"We're as healthy and competitive as we've ever been at the running back position," he said. "I think there's great competition and that will evolve through fall camp. You hope it reveals itself."

He added they'll take as long as it takes, and they'll go by committee or go with one guy as it shakes out.

Campbell also said the cornerback position is as healthy as it's been in years. He likes having good depth in today's era of football, and how multiple they can be.

"There's a lot of guys who have played a lot of football in that group," he said. "They're all hitting the right time in their career."

He mentioned Darien Porter and how he's grown and where he's at

through his time at Iowa State. They want to get him on the field more, and he's taken the ball and ran with it through the offseason. TJ Tampa, who has had great moments, is looking to be more consistent to bring his game up a little bit. Myles Purchase, who got six games last year as a true freshman, will continue to see the field. Tayvonn Kyle has seen a good deal of football and has been having the best 11 months of his career.

To determine who sees the field early on, Campbell said the first item they evaluate is if they trust them or not. He said there are a lot of ways they can go with a trust factor with their physical, mental abilities. The second is the ability to do their job.

"You have to do your one/eleventh, and if you don't do your job, we're probably going to get beat," he said.

He also wants them to make plays in their system too. But those two first factors are vital to Campbell and his program.

Campbell also mentioned the kicker position is up for grabs and the competition has been fierce for it as they try to replace Andrew Mevis. There are three players trying to get the kicking duties and will continue to battle for it through camp.

Campbell talked about offensive lineman Tyler Miller, and thinks he can be a fixture at left tackle for quite a few years. He also mentioned Trevor Downing at center and Campbell feels it's one of the most important positions on the team. He said his center has to be highly intelligent and when talent at the position is at a high end, it helps the rest of the line.

"We are going to play the best players who show those qualities we want," Campbell said. "We owe it to the team to play the right players. We also have to make those adjustments and our kids understand that."

Iowa State starts the season at home on September 3 against Southeast Missouri.

Engineers, contractors, and chamber members are looking forward to the next step in the development of “Peace Plaza” in downtown Hampton.

Bids go out for Peace Plaza

BY TRAVIS FISCHER

The Greater Franklin County Chamber of Commerce is moving forward on a new development in downtown Hampton.

Working with Atura Architecture, bids are going out for a renovation of the vacant downtown lot that will transform it from an empty lot of grass into a small community patio.

“The bid process will happen within the next couple weeks,” said Julie Salvesen, who has been working towards this project for two years.

“We want it to be done right.”

Once finished, “Peace Plaza” will feature a paved seating area and a shelter that can host small events or just offer a place for downtown visitors to enjoy the outdoors.

Contractors will be focusing on local businesses to do the work and Atura will be reviewing bids on August 23.

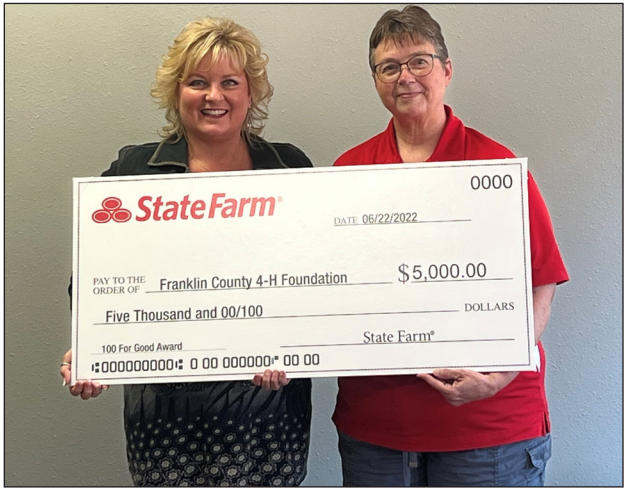

“We’re hoping the project starts in late fall or early next year,” said Chamber Director Bill Hittle.

Franklin County 4-H receives $5,000 assist from Good Neighbor agent

State Farm gives $1.6M to U.S. communities in celebration of 100th anniversary

State Farm agent Holly Narber has a strong history of demonstrating what it means to be a Good Neighbor in her community. The local agent recently presented Franklin County 4-H Foundation with a $5,000 State Farm grant. The youth leadership organization was selected by Holly as part of her recognition for being a State Farm 100 for Good Champion.

“At State Farm, we are committed to helping build stronger communities,” says Holly, who supports them personally and understands how 4-H organizations positively impact youth.

“For me, it’s not enough to simply say we’re a Good Neighbor, we embrace the responsibility to make our community better by being a part of a solution.”

“We’re grateful to Holly and State Farm for this grant!” says Jackie Dohman, County Youth Coordinator, Franklin County 4-H. “The funds are being put to good use assisting Franklin County 4-H in promoting our programs and providing additional scholarships to our members to attend Regional and State 4-H events.”

Area law enforcement, firefighters, and EMS crews gathered on Tuesday for a meet and greet with the community during National Night Out.
